Farewell to Dreams.
Law Conquers War.
Murder Is Glory No More.
"Rights of Kings"—Good-by.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.
Farewell, a very long, permanent farewell to that "Berlin to Bagdad" dream.
Farewell to the dream of world empire, with one big Hohenzollern on a big throne ruling the world and six little Hohenzollerns on six other thrones.
Farewell to all the Hohenzollern brutality.
And farewell, Heaven be praised, to the nightmare of murder that has oppressed the world for four years.

The Bulgarian murderer, little brother of the wholesale Hohenzollern killer, has given up. He lifts his bloody hands above his head, begging for peace in his bandit language.
You may be sure that the armistice was not signed until the allies had exacted such terms as will end Bulgarian murdering and Prussian control of Bulgaria.

For more than two thousand years the dream of world rulers has been a STAINING POINT IN EUROPE, AND ALL ASIA FOR AN EMPIRE.

Alexander dreamed the dream and made it real. He took his Macedonians from Greece, and as an Oriental potentate lived in Asia, ruling as much of the world as he cared to conquer.

Napoleon had the same dream. Lord Rosebery in his book on Napoleon—"The Last Days"—tells how the Bonapartes, from little Corsica, planned ruling the world from Asia. He would ride on an elephant, dressed in Oriental costume, and he thought that, on the whole, he would adopt some Asiatic religion as best for his purpose.

But Napoleon did not end on the back of an elephant in Asia. He ended on the rock of St. Helena, where the English put him.

And the preposterous, murderous, out-of-date, second-class, made-in-Germany Hohenzollern imitation of Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon and the others will also end wherever the British and the United States may put him.

Well might there be a panic on the Berlin stock exchange last Saturday. They knew then the truth that we know now. The false hope that Prussia held out to her people was that wealth, gold, and wheat would pour into Germany from Russia and Roumania. Russia herself is starving and Roumania is in rebellion.

The Prussians hoped that with the way from Berlin to Constantinople open, supplies from Asia would come.

But the allies now have Bulgaria, and Bulgaria blocks the road from Berlin to Constantinople. This writer happened to be on the way to Constantinople from Paris thirty odd years ago, when the Bulgarian prince was kidnapped in the course of Balkan disturbances. Anybody who wanted to reach Constantinople had to get out of the train, hire a coach, and drive around Bulgaria; you couldn't go through.

If the Kaiser now wants to go from Berlin to Constantinople, or Berlin to Bagdad, he also will have to get out when he reaches Bulgaria, hire a hack and drive around.

Future histories will point to the surrender of Bulgaria as the collapse of the last effort at world dominion, by any murdering individual, on this earth.

All through the thousands of years of recorded history the only great glory has been the glory of death and the sword.

The so-called "Glorious Monarch," Louis XIV of France, engraved on every one of his cannon Ultima ratio regum the last argument of kings.

Frederick the Great, who also had a Hohenzollern brother named Henry, wrote to that brother, "Don't forget your great guns, which are the most respectable arguments of the rights of kings."

Those great guns, only argument of kings, are about to be silenced on this earth, by the power of democracy. And the rights of kings themselves will be made the same as rights of other men—as they have long been in Great Britain.

Glory based on murder, cannon and conquest will vanish from the earth, never to return with the ending of this war.

Outbreaks may occur, crimes may be committed in Europe, America, Africa, or Asia, and the murderers may call themselves conquerors. But civilization united will attend to them, as the police in cities attend to individual murderers.

Killing and glory will henceforth be separated in history.

Future generations will be taught that all the glory of all the conquerors that ever lived pales before the great conquest of democracy.

Does anybody doubt that the name of Woodrow Wilson will stand in history as a benefactor of the world, higher than the names of all the great conquerors? Under his guidance, law has conquered war, and democracy has conquered autocracy.

34 "WILFUL" SUFFRAGE FOES DENOUNCED BY SEN. CUMMINS

By a vote of 61 to 22 the Senate this afternoon tabled an amendment to the woman's suffrage resolution to exclude negro women from its provision.

Still facing what seemed almost certain defeat, suffrage leaders announced this afternoon that they would send the woman suffrage amendment to a vote today. They frankly acknowledged that their latest polls showed the anti-suffragists still in control of thirty-four votes.

Senator Cummins, with unaccustomed bitterness, attacked a "little group of wilful men," who, he said, would be responsible for defeat of the measure. He was one of the "wilful men" denounced by the President just before the United States entered the war.

"I very much fear that a little group of wilful men is about to defeat a measure which the President has declared, in all the richness of his vocabulary, and with all the emphasis he could command, is vitally necessary to the successful prosecution of the war," Cummins said.

Hits At Democrats.

Addressing the Democratic side of the chamber, he continued: "You are about to flout, disparage, repudiate, and humiliate your President. I sincerely hope there will not fall upon you that severe condemnation which at another time was visited upon another group of wilful men who desired nothing more than an opportunity to amend a measure then before the Senate."

D. C. BOND SALES PASS FIVE MILLION

Washington today passed the $5,000,000 mark in subscriptions to the fourth Liberty loan, according to estimates made shortly after noon.

The city is expected to subscribe enough during the rest of the day and tonight to reach the $6,000,000 mark in its campaign to fill the District's quota of $27,608,000.

"We thank you," said the District Liberty loan committee today to the people of Washington; "now let's keep on buying more bonds."

Crowd At Hut.
Thousands of enthusiastic and patriotic citizens stood at attention in Liberty Hut last night while the greatest military band of all time, the Great Lakes Naval Battalion Band, led by the "March King," Lieut. John Philip Sousa, played "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Following the opening ceremony, Lieutenant Sousa played for the first time in the National Capital his new piece, written especially for the fourth Liberty loan, "The Flies of Freedom," an arrangement of the national anthems of Belgium, Italy, France, England, and America. Secretary Bryan, of the Y. M. C. A., then led the entire audience in the new American yell:

"A-M-E-R-I-C-A,
"Hoorsy, ray, ray."
Stirred to great depths of enthusiasm by the perfect music and

The seventh floor of the Emergency Hospital, devoted to patients suffering from Spanish influenza, was today placed under quarantine.

Eighteen hundred pupils of six public schools in Alexandria county are at their homes today and the schools are closed by order of Superintendent of Schools Fletcher Kemp.

Spanish influenza appearing in the homes of students of the schools caused the authorities to close the schools indefinitely. Orders were issued yesterday morning and six schools were closed. They are Fort Myer Heights, Clarendon, Barrcott, Columbia Pike, Ballston, and Cherrydale schools.

YANKS MOP UP FOE'S TUNNELS THAT TRAPPED AUSTRALIANS

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Oct. 1.—New York troops today are securely holding the main Hindenburg trench system, leading southward from Le Catelet. They sent back 150 additional prisoners last night.

The New Yorkers reached Gouy (adjoining Le Catelet on the east), their final objective, yesterday morning. The Australians, who followed the same path in the afternoon, are still engaged in a desperate fight with the Germans, who had sprung up in great numbers, preventing the Americans from going right through.

The uncanny appearance of the boches is explained through the discovery of a system of underground tunnel passages, feeding the territory between Gillemeot farm (two miles west of Le Catelet) and the wires of the Hindenburg first line.

Anas Strike Trap.
The New Yorkers, keeping pace with the troops from Tennessee and the Carolinas, failed to discover the traps, but the Australians waded directly into them. The Australians at first thought the Americans had been cut off and fought coolly, under the incentive of rescuing their Yank comrades.

Germans from the crack Eighth and Fifty-fourth divisions continued pouring in from the left, fighting the Australians one of the stiffest fights of their crowded careers. When the New Yorkers were alerted, they held tightly to their principal objective, and the boches were unable to repair the breach in their line.

Pour Out Your Gold as They Pour Out Their Lives, Joffre Urges

PARIS, Oct. 1.—Marshal Joffre, in connection with the allies' military successes and on occasion of the Fourth Liberty loan, today made the following statement to the people of the United States.

"Victory approaches in hasty strides. But so that it will be still quicker, it is every citizen's task to give gold plentifully, so as to secure for those who pour out their blood all possible means to cast down the last resistance of our enemies."

GRAND VIZIER, ANTI-TEUTON, IS ATTEMPTING TO GET TRUCE

LONDON, Oct. 1.—Advices reaching here at noon today indicate a definite move in Turkey to follow Bulgaria in asking the allies for an armistice.

According to these reports, which are received unofficially, Talat Pasha, the grand vizier, is leading a move for peace on the allies' terms. Color is given to this dispatch by the fact that Talat Pasha is known to be the chief antagonist of Enver Pasha, chief of the pro-German element among the Turks.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis, who has lately returned from abroad, declared today that if certain religious propositions could be adjusted Turkey would readily seek peace.

He said the different religious faiths in Turkey wanted to be assured of conditions under which they would be enabled to exist without being molested.

ANARCHY RAMPANT IN BULGAR CAPITAL

Complete anarchy reigns at Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, according to cables from Athens today. The dispatch adds that "establishment of a Bolshevik regime is feared. This would mean a massacre of all Germans."

BULGAR OFFICERS SHOT BY OWN MEN

LONDON, Oct. 1 (12:35 p. m.).—Bulgarian officers who tried to stop the flight of their troops were murdered, it was learned from inhabitants of districts which the allies have overrun. The Serbian war office announced today.

In heavy fighting on Monday the allies captured Orlovik and Gradishko, and the northern edge of the Chovho Polje.

10,000 MORE TURKS IN BRITISH HANDS

LONDON, Oct. 1.—A Turkish force of 10,000 men has surrendered to the British in Palestine, according to an official announcement. The text of the statement follows:

"In Palestine, during September 29, the northward movement of our cavalry and armored cars from the Tiberias-Derat area continued.

"A large Turkish force, including elements composing the Turkish garrison on the Hadjaz railway between Amman and Maan, surrendered at Zita Station.

"The force is said by its command to number 10,000 men and to be a part of the Second army corps of the Fourth Turkish army."

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 1.—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria has arrived at Esenatch Castle outside Vienna, according to the Frankfurter Zeitung.

Riots are reported in Constantinople.

This is the first news that Bulgaria's ruler has again left the country. It lends apparent credence to

ARMY WILL TRAIN HIGH SCHOOL BOYS

The general staff is considering extension of the students' training plan to preparatory and high schools, to care for young men of military age attending these institutions. In a letter to Senator Hitchcock, Colonel Reese, in charge of student training activities today said some way must be found to train these youths, and if officers can be found for the work the secondary schools will be included soon.

FIREBUG DESTROYS SCHOOL.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 1.—A mysterious incendiary has become a serious menace to Atlanta property. The latest toll of the firebug was the Fraser street school building.

PRESIDENT ISSUES CALL FOR SEAMEN

All men who have had any experience in seafaring life were called upon, in a personal appeal by President Wilson today, to submit with their questionnaires a detailed account of such experience, so that the Government may know where to obtain seamen when their services are required for the merchant marine. The work of the season is so vitally essential, the President points out, that they have been given deferred classification in the draft. Every seaman and former seaman should not hesitate to accept deferred classification, he says, no matter how eager he may be to join the fighting forces on land or sea.

CAPTAIN FOUND DEAD IN CAMP

SUANTANBURG, S. C., Oct. 1.—Captain James A. Jones, of the quartermaster corps, was found dead in bed at Camp Wadsworth yesterday morning with a bullet wound through the head. It was learned here today. Captain Jones arrived in camp a few days ago from Washington and had been assigned to the position of camp subsistence officer. The dead officer was forty years of age and unmarried. He was engaged in the wholesale grocery business in Memphis for ten years.
